Guideline for Asset Declaration Administrators

Anti-Corruption Commission

DRAFT

Introduction

Towards promoting greater transparency and accountability in managing public resources by public officials, the Anti-Corruption Commission (ACC) adopted the Asset Declaration (AD) rules in 2008. The same was revised in 2012 and accordingly introduced the online AD system. Further, ACC revised the AD rules in 2017 to provide greater clarity to the rules itself by incorporating necessary changes in the specification of the frequency of declarations; declaration contents; roles and responsibilities of Asset Declaration Administrators, Central Asset Declaration Administrator and Head of Agencies; and penalties. Accordingly, the online AD system has also been revised and improved with simplified and more user-friendly declaration and validations.

To manage AD efficiently, the Asset Declaration Administrators (ADA) shall be responsible for the management of AD in their respective agencies and the CADA shall be responsible for the management of AD of Schedule I declarants.

For greater clarity, the detailed roles and responsibilities of ADA and CADA has been mentioned in rules 23 and 24 of the AD rules 2017.

Further, in keeping with Section 38 (f) of ACAB 2011, this guideline has been developed to assist the ADA in administering AD in the online AD system and provide procedures for the management of AD. This guideline will help ADA with detailed steps on how to prepare covered person list, accept registrations, verify and accept declarations, generate AD compliance report, take action against those late declarants and send ATR as required

Introduction

Section 38 of the Anti-Corruption Act of Bhutan (ACAB) 2011 stipulates that "Public servants or other individuals using public resources shall prepare, declare accurately and truly and file their personal assets, income and liabilities, as well as, those of their spouses and/or dependents*". Thus, public servants, as custodians of public resources are required to file their Asset Declaration (AD). This is mainly to promote greater transparency and accountability in managing public resources by public officials.

To administer and manage AD efficiently, the Anti-Corruption Commission (ACC) adopted the Asset Declaration (AD) Rules in 2008. The same was revised in 2012 and accordingly the online AD system was introduced. ACC further revised the AD Rules in 2017 to provide greater clarity to the rules itself by incorporating necessary changes in the specification of the frequency of declarations; declaration contents; roles and responsibilities of Asset Declaration Administrators, Central Asset Declaration Administrator and Head of Agencies; and penalties. The online AD system has also accordingly been revised and simplified.
Further, in keeping with Section 38 (f) of ACAB 2011, this guideline has been developed to assist the online ADS users with detailed steps in filing AD. This User Guide for Online ADS
